Welcome the Colorado
Eas' Come, Qui...
Great Engine, the Heart
By Arthur Brisbane

By a vote of two to one the people of Upper Silesia decide that they would rather be German than Polish. This is explained by the reading of history. Man naturally wants to be with the winner, and Germany's record for winning fights is greater than that of Poland.

Also, in spite of recent happenings, Germany's record for industrial and financial prosperity is higher than Poland's.

That German triumph in Upper Silesia means much to many countries, including this. It returns to Germany the richest Silesian coal deposits. And in those deposits is much competition for industry and labor outside of Germany.

A newspaper is agitated because 75 per cent. of the world's population is in the League of Nations, the United States being the only big country to stay out of its own accord.

Americans are not agitated about that. The nations that are crowding into the league are crowding each other, many of them fighting each other, several of them robbing each other, nearly all of them planting little troubles that will grow into future wars.

Uncle Sam says to them: "All right, go into your leagues. I'll stay out, attend to my business, watch you carefully and keep ready for anything that happens."

A good sign of peace is the launching today of the super-dreadnought, Colorado. Twenty-eight thousand horsepower will drive this battleship of 33,500 tons, and good marksmen will stand behind her sixteen-inch guns, mounted, two on each of the four big turrets.

It is no bad to spend the money, a great pity that it is necessary, but it is necessary, and that settles it.

There are peace arguments in that battleship that no pacifist contains. You read how Mr. Trotsky, originally an ardent pacifist, put to death all the leaders captured in the recent revolt in Kronstadt, and you decide not to put your faith in pacifism, or any child of man, but to put it in your "warships, flying machines, submarines, well-trained, modernized army. You observe how Switzerland went through the great war unindicted in the midst of it all. She attended to her own business and kept prepared.

Madame Hoff, French lady, won a million francs in a government lottery. That is a great deal of money in France. Madame Hoff hired servants, bought some automobiles, got a house, lost money generously. In twenty days her million francs were gone. Keeping money is a business for itself, as a wise man once remarked. If you don't practice saving with a LITTLE, you won't be able to practice with a LOT in case you get it.

At New Orleans, Ben Hecht, fifty years old, died, after living twenty-six hours with his heart exposed to the eyes of the curious. The unfortunate man had been mangled by machinery.

The great French surgeon, Carrel, operating on a dog at the Rockefeller Institute, for removal of part of the lung—a preliminary way to such operations on human beings—held in his hand the beating heart of the unconscious dog, and said: "There is the most wonderful engine in the world."

Three-quarters of an hour later the dog, having suffered abominably no pain and lost less than ten (tenths) of blood in the operation, was running about perfectly cheerful and well.

A wonderful engine! Indeed, is the heart that begins its work before we are born, and with its last beat sends every death warrant. The marvelous power in resistance of the human body was proved in the case of that woman whose heart, for twenty-six hours, uncovered and unprotected, continued its work faithfully. Well may the psalmist cry out, "I am fearfully and wonderfully made!"

A Brooklyn clergyman calls Edison, Rockefeller and DuPont the three most useful men living. They may be and perhaps not, we cannot judge our own generation.

This writer has read many writings of Leonardo Da Vinci without seeing any reference to Christopher Columbus—although Leonardo lived for twenty-seven years after Columbus discovered America.

Leonardo was an intelligent observer, and Columbus certainly was the most useful man living in his day. Yet Leonardo Da Vinci, who surely is included in the world's 100 greatest men, paid apparently no attention to the work of Columbus.

Little animals that live on the edge of Mount Everest never saw the top of it and probably don't know it's a mountain. We sometimes fail to see the great things close to us.

Many Skilled Men and Heads of Families Apply for Laborers' Jobs in Salem

Salem, March 22.—There was a demonstration of the unemployed at City Hall here today.

More than 100 men, some of them ex-servicemen, entered the municipal building and asked to be allowed to sign a register setting forth their need of employment, although willing to work.

Several hundred others were gathered without the building, but dispersed when it was found there were no facilities for registering the jobless.

It was stated at City Hall that lack of a register was due to the failure of those who organized the demonstration to make complete arrangements through the Central Labor Union.

The registering of the idle men had been planned to impress the city government with the need of providing work on city improvements.

The crowd was quiet and within City Hall was orderly and consisted of middle-aged workers of the skilled artisan class, obviously heads of families.

After the show of numbers President C. W. Fitzgerald of the Central Labor Union said he believed the city government should do something to relieve idleness.

He said there was city money in the hands which could be laid out for municipal improvements and repairs, and which would keep many self-respecting men, including former service-men, from suffering.

SOUTH END SHAKEN BY MANHOLE BLOW-UP

Pocket of Gas Explodes With Tremendous Roar in Front of No. 865 Washington St.

A pocket of gas, formed in a manhole of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, in front of No. 865 Washington street, exploded with a tremendous roar today, shattering the windows of nearly a score of buildings.

No person was injured, as rapid as the explosion was, but the damage was done at several thousand dollars. Officials of the company were unable to state how the explosion occurred.

The manhole cover was blown only a few feet into the air.

Hawaii Menaced by Nippon Fleet

How Japan maintains a veritable auxiliary naval fleet, terrorist army and spy system in the Hawaiian Islands is revealed in the second installment of the remarkable article by Joseph Timmons of the Los Angeles Examiner staff on the Japanese "invasion" of these islands, which is printed today.

By JOSEPH TIMMONS.

Four hundred thirty-five Japanese sampans—power fishing boats—hold Hawaiian territorial licenses. They compose a veritable mosquito fleet adjunct to the Japanese navy, with many Imperial navy reservists in their crews, and we have nothing with which to thwart their particular form of activities.

These innocent-looking, flat-bottomed craft are the fastest boats in Hawaiian waters. They make from ten to fifteen knots. A considerable number have a sailing radius of 1,200 miles and most of them carry gasoline enough to take them 500 miles and return.

Some are sixty feet long. The medium-sized ones can easily transport fifty or sixty men. They carry crews of from three or four to fifteen, and it is known that many, especially the captains and engineers, have served in Japan's navy.

These fast craft fit about the island waters. They know every

Needed a Lawyer and Wanted Hughes

By International News Service.
New York, March 22.—When Kate Telford Hicks was arraigned before Judge MacGillivray in General Sessions Court on a minor charge the court announced that as she had no attorney present one would be assigned for her, and asked if she had any preference.

Too, I would like Charles Evans Hughes," replied the defendant.

Hughes, being Secretary of State, was busy at Washington and the woman had to be content with a lesser light.

GREAT WARSHIP MYSTERY GIRL IS LAUNCHED AT CAMDEN

Camden, N. J., March 22.—The United States added the second of the world's greatest battleships to her fleet today with the launching of the superdreadnought Colorado at the New York shipbuilding yards into the water of the Delaware river.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, assistant Secretary of the Navy, gave the signal which sent the giant craft on its journey down the river.

Mrs. Max Merrill of Beaver, Cal., broke a bottle of champagne over the bow and gave the ship its name.

In size and power the Colorado is surpassed by no battleship afloat and is equalled by only one other battleship, her sister ship, the Maryland, launched at Newport News in March, 1920. Two other ships of the same class, the Washington and West Virginia, are under construction.

Mrs. Max Merrill of Beaver, Cal., broke a bottle of champagne over the bow and gave the ship its name.

Displacement, 22,500 tons; length, 274 feet; speed, 21 knots; main battery, eight 16-inch guns; secondary battery, sixteen 5-inch guns and four 3-inch anti-aircraft guns; two gunnery torpedoes; and collected complement 1,445 men.

Schooner Founders at Sea
St. John's, N. F., March 22.—Bound from this port for Gibraltar with a cargo of codfish, the schooner Roberts was found according to reports, reaching here. Her crew was picked up by the steamship Triumph.

Four men have reported to the police that they saw her leap to death. She had passed them a few minutes before she was in the bridge, they said. She was decidedly attractive and well dressed.

Midway across the bridge she stopped, lay off her hat and coat and threw herself into the water. Their cry to her produced no effect, beyond causing her to hurry.

The hat was a purple affair, from a Providence military store. It is the principal clue to her identity.

The coat was of brown material, with a pink collar, and expensive. In the pocket were found a white handkerchief and a pair of eyeglasses with a gold chain.

Coast, every reef, depth of water everywhere, tides and currents and winds. In consequence the Japanese navy knows infinitely more of these important details than does our own navy. They "know their heels" to our smaller boats, and our single revenue cutter and an occasional old destroyer sent for a visit to the islands cannot keep up on such a mosquito swarm as this.

Beyond doubt the sampans and their crews would prove most troublesome in the event of war—as pilots, as spies, as couriers, as fighters to carry soldiers ashore from transports and food and ammunition from supply ships, as transports to carry soldiers between islands.

Besides these boats, however, there are approximately 40,000 small boats in the Japanese navy. It is estimated that at least 10,000 are in the Japanese navy and the rest are in the hands of the Japanese people.

American Public Needs Changed Conception

That the American military position in the Hawaiian Islands is not as strong as it appears to be, is a fact which will be admitted by every well-informed army or navy officer. It is true that the American people are not aware of this, and that the American people are not aware of this, and that the American people are not aware of this.

Because this is the case, the American people are not aware of this, and that the American people are not aware of this, and that the American people are not aware of this.

AN EDITORIAL ON ADVERTISING

TO realize the Value of Advertising—just imagine a world without it. There would be no standard of value. Petty cunning would have the strangle hold on honest purpose. Sliding prices and special discounts would lure the buyer into thinking he had bought a bargain, when he had paid too much. The "Get All You Can" dealer with his policy of Caveat Emptor (let the buyer beware) might predominate over the one-price dealer whose policy is the square deal for all. No buyer would know what was the right price—or the fair value.

PRICES on the same article

In different localities would vary 100, 200 and 300 per cent. depending upon what the traffic could bear in each locality.

Every purchase would be like an old-fashioned horse trade, with the advantage on the side of the rapacious and avaricious. The buyer and seller would be antagonists.

Distrust and suspicion would be the order of the day. There would be no uniformity of quality or value. There would be hundreds of brands where one exists now. This would mean higher production costs, higher selling cost, and difficulty of choice on the part of the buyer.

And get all you can! That is the "sliding price" dealer and the suspicious buyer of uncertainty on the part of the buyer would result in a bargaining method of buying and selling that wastes the most precious thing in the world—time.

Purchases that now take a moment or so would take hours. Economic necessity demands it. It changes utterly to certainty—Chaos to system, and under the daylight of truth furnishes the most economic system of distribution that has ever been devised.

Coroner's Jury Finds 16-Year-Old Boy Died From Bullet Fired by Youth

Barber's Ferry, N. Y., March 22.—Whether pretty Katherine Lathrop was intentionally murdered by her boy sweetheart or committed suicide is the question that is baffling the police here.

The body of the girl, who was sixteen years old, was found on a sofa in the parlor of her home, she had been shot through the head.

When last seen alive she was with James Stevens, eighteen, of Haverhill, N. Y. Stevens was indicted by the coroner's jury, which rendered a verdict that Miss Lathrop came to her death at the hands of James Stevens, by a bullet supposed to be fired by him.

The boy claims that he laid the revolver, which he had carried from his home, on a parlor organ, and that the girl had picked it up in spite of his warning. He says that she then placed the pistol against her head and, crying that two girl friends had forsaken her, pulled the trigger. He said that she fell with her head in his lap.

Feeling that her parents would kill him, he fled the way later arrested and taken to Charleston, W. Va., for trial.

Bargain of Honor

Mr. Winterdick, if you please, said Mr. Ironstone was nodding over his after-dinner cigar when Philip was sitting at his big chair with a sort of sleepily bewildered, uncertain whether he had usually heard the maid's voice, when Philip himself walked into the room.

That woke him thoroughly, and he started up with outstretched and.

My dear boy, closed. Sit down—have a cigar—take my hat. Nonense, I insist!" Philip ignored chair and cigar like; he stood stiffly by the table, looking at his future father-in-law. "You would not have asked Dennis to look who I should be coming."

"No—not a word—but I'm delighted all the same. Do have a cigar. Half dollar here, they cost me. No? Very well, then. Sit down, my dear boy."

Philip was a little surprised; he had been sure that his father-in-law would pave the way for him, as he felt at a shabby disadvantage. Mr. Dennison looked at him and sighed nervously.

"Hot night," he ventured after a moment.

"Very," Philip answered absently.

There was a moment's silence; suddenly the young man perceived his neighbor leaning forward. "I've come to ask your permission to marry your daughter, sir," he said.

It was out at last, and he drew a long breath of relief. His had been his heart beating for some time, the sky had not fallen and he was still surviving.

Mr. Dennison dropped his cigar—it was a habit of his when he was very much astonished.

"Because the thing that had chiefly taken his breath away was the fact that a Withers—a Withers—of the highest lineage had called him 'sir.' His head was almost stunned by the unexpectedness."

Mr. Dennison laughed.

"Don't mention it—I don't mean it!"

Philip bowed and turned to the matter of business that was pressing upon them, and—ah—and nobody could have seen the young man's face, what they? Poo! Y!

"I am tired of deceit," he agreed. "But you said you wanted the matter kept secret until I made good my claim. These things must wait."

"I am not afraid," she said confidently. "I would be forever for you, Marjorie."
